Ernest H. "Hank" Jones, III

Allison Ellis, Executive Director

Greetings Fellow AAM Members:

I hope this newsletter finds you doing well. I feel incredibly privileged and humbled to be sending you this President's letter.

First, I want to take this opportunity to express gratitude, both personally and on behalf of our organization, to Jimmy Lawson for his steadfast leadership as President this past year. None of us could have predicted that his time in that role would face the challenges of a global pandemic. Nevertheless, despite the inability to travel and convene in-person with our colleagues, Jimmy's optimism and perseverance were instrumental in ensuring that the educational and collegial functions of AAM persisted, and our organization continued to thrive. Thanks Jimmy for your commitment and leadership!

It was amazing to see so many attendees at our virtual Annual Conference in April. We had 165 total registrants for the event, hailing from 23 states! As we are always looking to grow and extend the reach of our organization, it was notable to have 26 non-members registered. I want to thank our presenters for generously investing their time, sharing their insights, and delivering a terrific program. We are also grateful for the input we received from our attendees in the post-event evaluations, which will help guide our planning of future conferences. And I extend a special thanks to Allison Ellis for all her hard work behind the scenes to make the event an unqualified success!

I also wish to congratulate Danielle Hargrove on her selection as President-Elect. We are thankful for Danielle's many insights and contributions over the years, including as a Board member, a conference presenter, and valued colleague. Undoubtedly, AAM will benefit greatly from Danielle's leadership in this additional role.

We continue to navigate the uncertainties associated with COVID-19. Considering the survey responses we received from our members, we are planning the Fall Conference to be held remotely. While we certainly will miss seeing each other in person, we are nevertheless grateful that technology allows us to continue collaborating and socializing. At the same time, assuming it is safe and possible to do so, it is our sincere desire and intention to convene in person at the Annual Conference in 2022.

Regardless, I am committed to ensuring that AAM remains a trusted and valuable resource for our members, providing world-class continuing education, thought leadership, and professional development in the ADR field. We will continue to look for ways to provide opportunities for collegiality and idea-sharing, both formal and informal. I expect that we will have periodic webinars on various topics. One priority is addressing the critical need for increased diversity in our profession. We also have begun, and will continue, to schedule informal virtual happy hours, providing an opportunity to check in and chat with colleagues.

I would welcome, and indeed I would be grateful for, any feedback or input from you on how AAM can best serve you. Feel free to reach me at frank@neunermediation.com.

In the meantime, all the best!

AAM Annual Meeting and Spring CLE Seminar

It was great to see so many of you in attendance (virtually, that is) on April 23, 2021 at our Annual Meeting and Spring CLE Seminar.

We had a tremendous turnout for this event – with 165 registrants, including 26 non-members! The level of engagement throughout the presentations – with questions and input throughout – was terrific.

We hope that you found the program to be thought-provoking, entertaining, and useful in your mediation practices.

We want to give special thanks to our fabulous presenters who together helped make the seminar a success -- Natalie Armstrong-Motin, Courtenay Bass, Trey Bergman, Misti Hill Carter, John DeGroot, Danielle L. Hargrove, Brian Hewitt, Michael Leech, Aaron Michelsohn, Cecilia Morgan, Steve Nelson, Frank Neuner, Christopher Sharp, John Shipp and Ross W. Stoddard, III. We greatly appreciate each of you taking valuable time to share your insights with our group.

2021 President's Award

The 2021 President's Award was presented to Paul Clote (Houston, TX) during the Annual Meeting. Paul epitomizes excellence in service for his continued care and passion for AAM. Paul continues to be a valuable resource and trusted advisor for the Board of Directors and Executive Director. Thank you, Paul!

Thank you

A special thank you to Member Chris Nolland (Dallas, TX) for speaking at our webinar on 1/15/2021. In case you missed it, “A Conversation with Chris Nolland” is available for on-demand viewing via the AAM website. Chris is a phenomenal presenter and shared insights and tips on mediating in today’s world.

Many of you joined us for our December 2020 and July 2021 Virtual Happy Hours. We plan to continue hosting these casual gatherings more frequently to allow opportunities to virtually connect with colleagues until we can safely be together in person again.

Zoom Mediations Are Effective and Here to Stay

By Patrick Keel

Patrick Keel, a former state district judge, has been a full-time mediator and arbitrator for over 16 years, helping resolve thousands of disputes involving all areas of civil litigation. He is also an adjunct professor and frequent guest lecturer at the UT School of Law.

After months of mediating cases by Zoom, how do lawyers feel about the video format compared to traditional, in-person mediation? I was genuinely curious, so I asked all lawyers in my contacts list. Over 300 shared their opinions by replying to an on-line survey.

The responses confirmed my suspicion: Lawyers believe that mediating by video conference has worked well. In fact, a huge majority of lawyers (75%) report that their effectiveness as advocates for their clients has been unchanged or even improved while using the video format (See Chart 1).

Likewise, 70% of lawyers rate the effectiveness of mediators as unchanged or even better by video (See Chart 2).

Moreover, the above responses reflect the opinions of experienced lawyers, not just young attorneys who might be expected to more easily adapt to mediating by video. Over 76% of the survey's respondents have practiced law for more than 15 years; only about 2% have been practicing for fewer than five years (See Chart 3).

Many of the responding lawyers' comments strike familiar themes: Mediating by video is different but manageable, eliminates the stress of travel and other logistical challenges, and minimizes "downtime" during mediation sessions.

What about the opportunity to reach a settlement by video compared to mediating in person? As with their views about mediators' and their own effectiveness, the responding lawyers reported either no change or an improvement—59% said no change and 13% said that the video format actually improved the chances of striking a deal (See Chart 4).

As one lawyer commented: If a case is not going to settle live, it won't settle by Zoom. If it likely would settle live, it'll likely settle by Zoom.

Finally, the above enthusiasm for mediating by video is also reflected in lawyers' predictions about the future. When asked whether they are likely to consider using video for mediations after the pandemic is over, a whopping 69% said yes. Only 12% said no, with the remaining 19% saying maybe (See Chart 5).

Among those who said they would consider mediating by video in the future, 44% said they would prefer to attend more than half of their mediations by video. See Chart 6).

As one lawyer said: Even after COVID, Zoom will have become the venue of choice for those who want to reduce travel time and expenses. Another predicted: There still will be occasions when in-person interaction between the mediator and one or more parties will prove beneficial. In most instances, that will not be a factor.

Here is a prediction of my own: Although many practices developed during the pandemic will carry over to our “return to normal,” there are plenty of things we used to do in person that we will still prefer to do in person. Thus, I anticipate that some of my post-pandemic mediations will still be conducted by Zoom; but most, I expect, will return to the traditional, in-person format.

Why? Right or wrong, I believe the view is cemented among both lawyers and mediators that personal interaction is a big part of mediation’s usefulness in settling disputes. Although platforms like Zoom have rescued us from sitting idle during Covid-19 and perhaps will cause some mediation participants to question expenses like travel, the majority of mediations will still be done in person, the “old-fashioned” way.

Time will tell. Here’s to being flexible enough to adapt to whatever the future holds.
